Rancher Matches Skill With Bandit in Vengeance Plot

Big Bend's Boldest "He Man" in Game of Hide and Seek

STORY OF HANNOLD

Bandit Candalaro Swore Vengeance Against Him

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of five stories on the Big Bend country of Texas, America's last frontier, by Harry McCormick, special correspondent for NEA Service.

BY HARRY MCCORMICK
NEA Service Writer

Art Hannold, so they tell you, was born in the saddle and cut his teeth on a six-gun.

Fifty years ago his father, Old Man John Hannold, settled in the Big Bend country of West Texas when the Indians still raided and long before Mexican bandits such as Candalaro Baeza became a menace to honest ranchers.

Ten years later Art Hannold arrived on the scene. His parents lived in a crude cabin in the shadow of the towering Chisos mountains, near what is now San Vicente, Texas, and miles from the nearest human habitation.

Art Hannold could ride a horse before he could talk. It is even said that Old Man Hannold placed a six-gun in his baby son's hand before his mother took him out of diapers, just to show her that she had a man child.

He grew to manhood on his father's little ranch, now one of the largest in the Big Bend, the nation's last frontier. He learned to rope steers before he learned his A B C's, and with a pistol he could pepper a target at 50 paces.

Courage Grew With Years

His reputation for courage and square dealing increased with his years and spread far and wide over the sparsely-settled and almost primitive area. If a poll was taken in the Big Bend country to select the best he-man, the best representative of the traditions and ideals of the old southwest, Art Hannold probably would be the choice in this country where men are men.

Today Art Hannold is in the prime of life. He is small in stature, as men go, but what he lacks in size is more than made up in other ways. His face is tanned to the color of buckskin and his eyes, even when they smile, have a look that seems to mean business.

Brought up in the saddle and with a gun in his hand, he has seen the struggle of the pioneers with the wilderness and played no small part in that struggle himself. Many times he has set out alone from his father's ranch house and taken the trail for days at a time to search for mountain lions and panthers that had been destroying cattle. Many a black and brown bear such as live in the mountains of the Big Bend has fallen under his deadly aim.

Marked for Vengeance

With a reputation for utter fearlessness and a willingness to go to any risks to preserve law and order in a wild country, it seems logical enough that Art Hannold should be the man upon whom the bandit Candalaro and his lieutenant, Jesus Horta, have sworn vengeance. It seems logical enough that he was the rancher.

Kent Says O'Neal Is Poor Reporter

Repeal Delegate Allowed to Speak Only When Crowd Demanded

Editor The Star: In regard to the statement Mr. N. P. O'Neal reported that I made at Spring Hill Tuesday night saying that there are boys in this county who can make a still in a cane-brake in 2½ hours, I find that the statement was a little too small.

The boys report that they can make it in 2 hours.

Mr. O'Neal reported in his letter to The Star that the anti-repeal folks holding the meeting at Spring Hill offered to divide time with me, when in fact that is not the case.

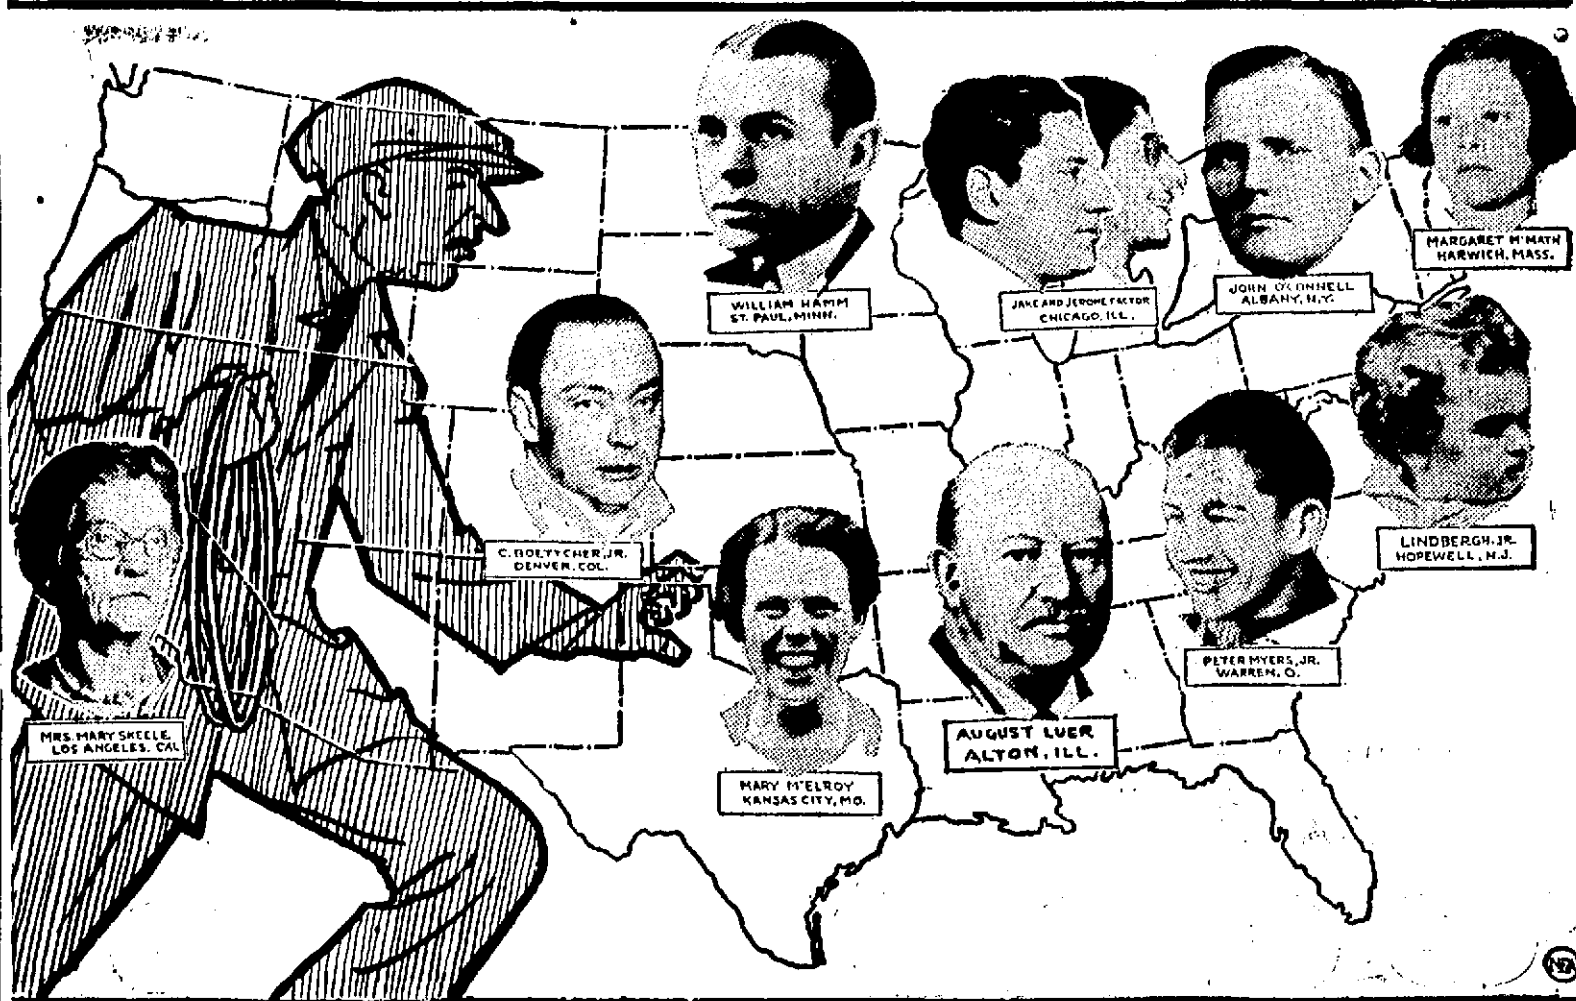

I called the chair's attention after the meeting was over with the anti's, and then the people began to holler for Kent to present the other side.

I just want to get this before the people in the interest of fair play and fair reporting.

Kidnaping Menace Grips Nation; a Dozen Since Lindbergh Case

Top—From coast to coast extends the kidnapers' menacing trail. Pictured here are victims of many of the abductions that have followed in the wake of the kidnaping and subsequent murder of baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., on March 1, 1932—a crime which stirred the world with horror. Sentences of ten years to life were meted out to two convicted of kidnaping Mrs. Mary Skeels of Los Angeles on March 1, 1933. Two convictions and two indictments resulted from the abduction of Charles Boettcher, Jr., at Denver, Colo., on February 12, but no one was arrested for the capture of Peter Myers, Jr., at Warren, Ohio, on March 1. The spiriting away of youthful Jerome Factor at Chicago on April 12 was followed on July 1 by the disappearance of his father, John (Jake) Barber Factor, who still is missing. Meanwhile, at Harwich, Mass., on May 2, little Margaret McMath had been kidnaped from school (a neighbor was convicted of the crime); on May 27, Mary McElroy, daughter of the Kansas City City Manager, was abducted (four alleged kidnapers are awaiting trial); and on June 15, at St. Paul, Minn., William Hamm was kidnaped—and returned three days later—by captors who demanded $100,000 ransom. Most recent kidnaping victims are 24-year-old John J. O'Connell, member of a politically dominant family at Albany, N. Y., who vanished on July 7, and August Luer, aged banker of Alton, Ill., who vanished on July 10. Both of the latter still are missing.

Middle—Orville S. Catt (left) and Lawrence Keller, Jr. (right) have been appointed to act for the Luer family in negotiations with the kidnapers who took Gustave Luer, 78-year-old banker of Alton, Ill., from his home July 10. Catt is sales manager for the Luer Packing Co. and Keller is trust officer in an Alton Bank, both controlled by the Luer family.

Bottom—Two doctors of St. Paul, Minn., strangers to each other, were kidnaped early July 12, and were found several hours later at a railway crossing near the city. A train crew found the two men when the train struck Dr. Hedberg's car which was on the track, and discovered Dr. Engberg had been given ether. Dr. Hedberg was found in a ditch near-by shot in side of the head. Both doctors will recover from the mysterious attack.

$3,200 for County From State Tax

Second Quarter Better Than First—But Year Is Behind

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—State Treasurer Roy V. Leonard Friday distributed $233,582 as "turnback" to the counties of one-sixth of the state gasoline tax collections for the second quarter of 1933.

Collections showed a slight increase over the first quarter. Hempstead county's turnback is $3,202.75.

The county's share of the one-cent turnback fund, originally approximately $17,000 a year, is approximately $12,500 a year, based on the second quarter's report.

Repeal Is Favored by Texas Sheriffs

Texas Association Unanimous for Legalization of Beer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—(AP)—The Sheriffs' Association of Texas, without a dissenting vote, has adopted a resolution favoring repeal of the 18th amendment and legal sale of 3.2 per cent beer.

The resolution was adopted at the sheriffs' convention here after State Senator Willie Hopkins of Gonzales delivered an address urging the body to go on record in favor of repeal and legalization of 3.2 per cent beer.

The convention also expressed itself as favoring a four-year term of office, straight salaries for sheriffs, and abolition of the fee system.

Stamp Collectors to Reap Harvest on Italian Flight

Rev. Thomas Brewster Discusses World's Greatest Hobby

HISTORY IN STAMPS

They Tell of National Events, Industry, Geography, Heroes

When General Italo Balbo lands his 24 Italian seaplanes at the Chicago World Fair Saturday after a 6,100-mile flight from Rome, stamp collectors will make a rush for approximately 10,000 pieces of mail. The Rev. Thomas Brewster, First Presbyterian pastor, told Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Not only is stamp-collecting one of the oldest and most fascinating of hobbies, but it helps finance such gigantic expeditions as Mussolini's sending of a tentative armada to the United States, the speaker said.

Every government, he said, orders special issues of stamps commemorating special events, and co-operating with collectors whose paid mail is an important item in offsetting even the cost of a trans-Atlantic flight.

No Child's Game

The speaker said: "If you think stamp-collecting a child's game you are very much mistaken. It can be as intricate and difficult as a problem in theology. I have been a stamp-collector since I was 9. There are probably a million collectors in America alone—and this hobby supports a host of magazines and clubs that appeal to collectors all over the world."

"Postage stamps tell me the pictorial history of a nation. I can follow in a stamp collection the major part of American history from 1845 down to the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition for which special stamps have been issued in 1933."

"Stamps tell me the geography of a nation."

"They tell me what relations a nation has with other countries. Not all the faces on United States stamps are American faces. One issue bears the face of General Pulaski, Polish hero who helped us in the Revolution. Another has the face of Baron von Steuben. And last year, the bi-centennial (1922) of the birth of George Washington, Poland commemorated this American with a special issue of Polish stamps."

"Stamps tell me of the scientific and industrial development of a nation, and the nature of its products. They fascinate me also as a fine work of the engraver. Put a postage

N. P. O'Neal Stops Talk by Bennett

Row at Dry Caucus—Carrigan for Repeal at Spring Hill

With Arkansas' referendum on the 18th amendment due next Tuesday, July 18, repeal and anti-repeal forces were winding up their campaign Friday in Hempstead county.

Steve Carrigan, it was announced, will speak at 8 o'clock Friday night at Spring Hill for the repeal forces. Anti-repeal forces appeared at Spring Hill last Tuesday, having previously held rallies at Washington and elsewhere in the county. They were reported planning a meeting at Ozon Saturday, but The Star was unable to verify this.

N. P. O'Neal, county chairman for the anti-repeal movement, presided over a caucus in Hope city hall Thursday night, at which the "dry" workers were pepped up, he told The Star. "We have named committees to watch every box in the county," Mr. O'Neal said.

The anti-repeal meeting in the city hall was not all harmony and understanding, however. The Rev. J. H. Bennett, local preacher, was stopped in the middle of an address by Chairman O'Neal.

According to word reaching The Star, Mr. O'Neal finished an address in which he said, "The wetts are on the run," when the Rev. Mr. Bennett got up and said, "I don't think so," and continued with a pessimistic speech until the chairman interrupted him.

Mr. O'Neal admitted he was compelled to stop the clergymen. "I told him," said Mr. O'Neal, "this was a pep-meeting—and nobody was going to stand for a wet blanket being thrown on a pep-meeting." Mr. O'Neal also reported that the Rev. Mr. Bennett dragged President Roosevelt into the controversy as one of the factors which made success of the anti-repeal movement doubtful.

Canadian Metropolis Last Stop Before Chicago World Fair

MONTREAL, Canada.—(AP)—The Italian air armada of 24 seaplanes, led across the North Atlantic by General Italo Balbo for a visit to the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago, landed safely here Friday afternoon.

The armada completed its sixth and next-to-the-last lap—the final jump being to Chicago.

SHEDIAC, New Brunswick.—(AP)—The Italian air armada led by General Italo Balbo hopped off from here Friday for Montreal on the next leg of its flight to Chicago.

Montreal, 500 miles distant, is the last scheduled stop before reaching Chicago's World Fair.

Finish Labrador Hop

SHEDIAC, N. B.—(AP)—Italo Balbo and his squadron of 24 Italian seaplanes, bound for the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, had arrived here late Thursday, completing at flight of 800 miles from Cartwright, Labrador, the fifth leg in the largest long distance mass air movement in history.

The armada started its takeoff from Cartwright, Labrador, where it arrived late Wednesday at 7:20 a. m., Hope time.

Sweeping in from the north in close formation, the first group of three arrived at 4:30 p. m. 1:30 p. m., Hope time. General Balbo, the Italian air minister, was piloting the leading plane.

General Balbo, after seeing all of his charges safely down, stepped into a motorboat and was taken to the wharf with five of his officers. Smiling and happy, he greeted the officials lined up waiting to receive him.

After an official welcome had been extended, the party of Italian aviators came into the city by automobile.

A welcoming message from the Dominion of Canada was read by Dr. J. Clarence Webster, chairman of the General Reception Committee.

The city was decorated with British and Italian flags and bunting and thousands of visitors were on the streets.

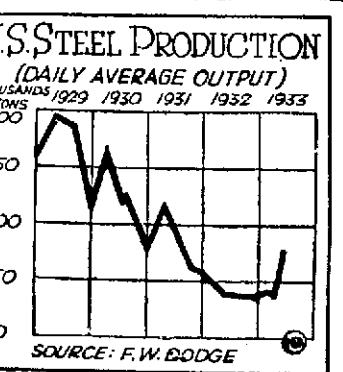

Immediate refueling of the squadron was begun by 24 dories which carried gasoline.

The next stage of the flight is to Montreal, a distance of 600 miles. From there the final stage of the trip lies to Chicago, 870 miles away.

Great Exporters Refused to Stabilize Currency With France

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—The steering committee of the world economic conference decided Friday to recess the parley July 27.

All committees were notified to have complete reports ready by next Friday, July 21.

A full review will be conducted the following Tuesday, July 25, and the final plenary session will be held July 27. It is understood great care will be taken to avoid a note of finality at the plenary session.

The Conference Falls

The London economic conference, attended by representatives of 86 nations, came to grief as the result of a conflict between the great commercial nations such as Great Britain and the United States, which went off the gold standard in order to rebuild their export trade, and the gold-standard nations represented by France, Italy and smaller European countries.

The French, owners of the largest per-capita gold supply in the world, demanded that currency-exchange-value be stabilized between nations. England and the United States, which have deliberately cheapened the pound and the dollar with respect to the French franc, refused to meet this demand.

Britain Started It

The crisis in currency-exchange began in September, 1931, when Great Britain abandoned gold and dropped the value of the pound from par $4.87 to around $4 (it went as low as $3.50 but recovered).

British exports gained at the expense of American trade, and this spring the United States went off gold in retaliation. The dollar dropped to be between 70 and 80 cents of par in terms of European currency. The American move shot the British pound back up to $4.70, practically offsetting the advantage obtained by the British in September, 1931, with regard to the United States, but maintaining a trade advantage for America and Britain against the gold countries, which was the fly in the ointment at the London conference for France and the other gold countries.

Although the term "recess" was substituted for "adjournment," the conference has failed, in the opinion of observers.

Cotton Reduction to Be Effective

Secretary Wallace Will Issue Governmental Order

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace announced Friday afternoon the fulfillment of the cotton acreage-reduction plan with sufficient offers made to reduce the potential crop this year 3½ million bales.

At the same time he announced that President Roosevelt had approved the processing tax of 4.2 cents per pound which will go into effect August 1. The retirement may exceed 10 million acres when all reports are in, he said.

Plan Takes Effect

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace expects to make public late Friday afternoon formal announcement of the application of the cotton acreage reduction program, it was learned Friday noon.

This brings to a successful close the campaign of more than two weeks to reduce the potential crop by about 3 million bales.

Returns from the campaign came in by mail and telegram from 16 cotton-producing states Friday and were sent to a special force of accountants to be tabulated, together with an analysis of the contract offers presented by the growers.

Asks Voluntary Action

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, told newspaper men Friday he expected it would be necessary to ask voluntary imposition of hour limits and an increase of wages by all business pending approval of the individual codes.

State Near Quota

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Arkansas is near its reduced quota of 910,000 acres in the cotton abandonment campaign. T. Roy Reid, assistant director of the State Extension Service, announced Friday upon receipt of reports from the intensive drive on Government Contract day, last Wednesday.

If your nose is close to the grindstone rough
And you hold it down there long enough
In time you'll say there is no such thing.
As brooks that babble or birds that sing.
These three will all your world console—
Just you—the stone—and your poor old nose.
Yet buds do blossom, and lilies are green,
And woods do lure with an ardent keen
And leaves are rustling and skies are there,
No matter whether you see or care,
And how can they come, do you suppose,
To you and the stone and your poor old nose?
If to go and seek them you still refuse,
It doesn't hurt them—it's you that lose.
For the zephyrus whisper and lovers sigh,
Whatever you doubt, disclaim, deny!
And the world's a rhyme—while you're but prose—
Yes, you and the stone, and your poor old nose.

How can we fool ourselves about the shoon? Nothing but misery and trouble has ever come from it, nothing can come from it but degradation. Here are a few of the things liquor has done for the human family:

Drink has drained more blood,

Defiled more innocence,

The speaker cited a recent sale in the East to show the tremendous value rare stamps sometimes attain. One set of four 24-cent air-mail stamps—96 cents worth—sold for $24,000. In this issue the engraver made a mistake. It showed an airplane upside down. This bloc of four stamps escaped into circulation—the only ones of their kind, hence their value, the Rev. Mr. Brewster concluded.

O'Neal Declares Rural Vote "Dry" And Says 90 Per Cent of Women Will Reject Repeal

Editor The Star: The writer has been casting up. Visiting 16 voting places lately, not including Hope. The drys have a smile on now. At every box it was the same statement. "We will vote dry."

We expect to have the list of votes the next day after the election. It may come in handy.

A canvass is being made of the women voters—not just a guesswork matter but person-to-person. There are a few women in Hope that do not remember. Born 30 years too late. But not less than 90 per cent of the 315 who have paid poll tax not only remember but have their courage in both hands and are determined to vote dry. Well if I had a wife, determined to vote dry, and I wanted peace hereafter, dry would be my choice also.

How can any woman with self-respect can afford to vote wet, be beyond me. Woman has prayed, pleaded, worked, persisted, insisted, cried, smiled looked her best and acted her best for many, many years, that she might get the ballot in order solely to vote on moral questions—and now that a trial has come where she can really leave politics aside and vote right, vote for the right, I cannot see how, I just cannot see how, they can vote wet knowing the great evils that will come upon us when we vote the saloon back. And to say that it will not come back is self-deception of the rankest order. It is already back, where they have indicated that it would be tolerated.

If we will not protect our children how can we hope or expect others to do it? We know what liquor makes

By HELEN WELSHIMER

I HEAR the sandman coming, and his feet make silver tracks,
He's scattering new lullabies from sixteen velvet packs.
He's rocking restless cradles where the children will not sleep.
Hushaby, you funny child! Oh, don't you hear him creep?

ALONG the wind, across the grass. . . He's coming, coming close,
And if he finds you still awake he'll make you take a dose
Of dreamy medicine that's sweet as sticky licorice drops;
But honey, if you go to sleep he'll leave green lollypops.

HE owns a ladder to the moon, he takes the wind to make
A hammock where he swings small boys (not those who are awake!)
And all the others sit around on toadstools feeling queer.
Oh go to sleep you wakeful child, the sandman's almost here.

New Music Show at the Saenger

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Diplomaniacs" Sunday

The comical musical number in Bert Wheeler-Robert Woolsey laugh farce, "Diplomaniacs," showing Sunday and Monday at the Saenger provide timely entertainment.

In one of these, enacted by Wheeler and Marjorie White, lately of "Hot-ch." Broadway musical comedy hit, Miss White portraying a blonde but belligerent charmer, decides she wishes to be wooed musically. Wheeler refuses and a wrestling match ensues. He is defeated finally and warbles tunelessly while Miss White sits astride his chest.

Another, in which both the comedians appear, is declared to be equally hilarious. The comedians are awakened, dragged from bed and dressed by a bevy of beautiful girls, the whole affair staged in rhythmic dancing and toe-ticking melody.

A brilliant cast enacts the plot of "Diplomaniacs" which presents Wheeler and Woolsey in a broad burlesque on the ineffectualities of the Peace Conference at Geneva.

RANCHER MATCHES

who gave the testimony that sen Hannold's brother to the Texas penitentiary as a cattle thief.

One might expect that the chosen method would be the ambush—a sudden shot from a dense thicket and a man left dying on the ground—but the crafty mind of a Mexican bandit sometimes works in an unusual way. Such a murder would be far too obvious and would be certain to cause quick and effective retaliation; it would be better, and safer, to have the killing done by others in an apparently legal way.

So Candalaro set his snare for Art Hannold, upon whom he had vowed vengeance.

On Candalaro's Trail
One morning early in May Hannold rose to find four of his horses had been driven off his ranch. Behind them was a trail that was perfectly clear to this man, used to following trails through the wilderness.

"Not much for horses," Hannold mused. "Guess anybody could have bought them for $150. But we don't do things that way down here in the Big Bend. If old Candalaro gets away with those horses this time he'll be back for more. So we'll just go after him."

Hannold called a cowboy, John Rollins, a veteran of the Rainbow division in the World War. They mounted their horses and set out.

Bed rolls slung across the backs of saddles, rifles in the slings and sixshooters at their sides they rode into Bouquillas a few hours later to inquire if Don Juan Sada and his wife, Chata, had seen anything of Hannold's horses.

Don Juan and Chata are veterans of the Rio Grande country. Don Juan once was captured by Mexican bandits and held for ransom, $500 being paid for his release. Chata, born and reared in the Big Bend country, has a reputation as a crack shot; many times guests for dinner at their ranch have seen her shoot off the head of a chicken she intended to cook.

On Into Mexico
Don Juan and Chata knew nothing of the stolen horses, so Hannold and Rollins crossed the shallow Rio Grande and entered Mexico, after getting a verbal permit from the Mexican government authorities at Bouquillas to enter the country under arms.

That was exactly what old Candalaro had hoped Hannold and Rollins would do. Mexican law says that a person entering the country under arms may be shot unless a permit is first obtained. The wily Candalaro apparently thought that the Americans would not get this permit and thus they would suffer the penalty, as rules regarding the entry of armed aliens into Mexico are seldom broken.

At least, this is the way in which two veterans of the Big Bend—Old Man John Hannold and his rancher neighbor, Tom Miller—figured out the plan of Candalaro.

These two old-timers know every written and unwritten law on both sides of the Rio Grande.

A Bad Man Outsmarted
Candalaro knew that Art Hannold would go after his stock. "Uncle Tom Miller said, "He thought that when he caught young Hannold he could have him killed by the government for entering Mexico under arms. But Art had obtained a verbal permit to go in there armed, and that is where he outsmarted Candalaro."

So it was thought these two ranchers of the Big Bend country rode off from Bouquillas into Mexico, searching for their horses which they felt certain Candalaro had driven away.

A few hours later they were to be captives in Candalaro's hands, miles across the border and far from any assistance that could be given them by their American friends.

But if the possibility of this dangerous eventuality occurred to Hannold and Rollins, it apparently didn't worry the ma bit, for they continued on their quest straight into the mountain area that Candalaro rules as a bandit king.

Typhoid Threat at River Unverified

Hope and Prescott Physicians See Very Little Danger

Reports current here and in Prescott that the Little Missouri river had been condemned for swimming purposes because of typhoid infection could not be confirmed Friday by The Star, and physicians said they doubted whether there was any real danger.

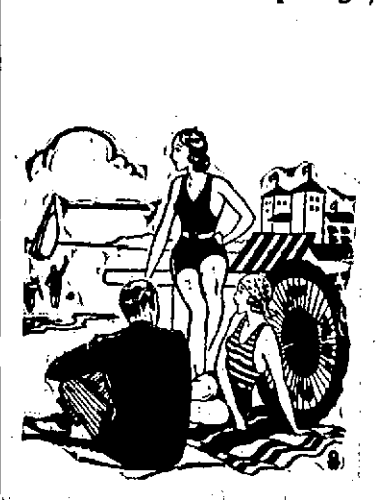

Dr. G. E. Cannon and Dr. L. M. Life were interviewed in Hope, and Dr. Al Buchanan, by telephone to Prescott. There is little or no typhoid in the country, and no reason to believe there is danger of infection from swimming in the river, authorities indicated. The typhoid report about the Little Missouri river appears every summer, and just as often is denied. The Star is told that the rumor started this year when a Prescott housewife used it as a threat to persuade her hopefuls not to go swimming for fear of drowning.

Cotton Climbs to Season Peak Again

New York October Closes Friday at 11.68

Cotton surged back up near the season's highest peaks Friday with expectations that Secretary Wallace would formally announce that the cotton acreage reduction plan would be put into effect.

New York October contracts closed Friday at 11.68, only two point under Wednesday's turnover of the bull market, which sent cotton skyrocketing to 11.70 for new high levels of the past two years.

The market opened at 11.58-61. Actual ive buying pushed the price up to 11.71 for the high of the day. Late buying reduces the advance.

Friday's gain was 14 points or 15 per bale, the previous close 11.54.
